We publish a dealer directory so you'll be assured in your travels of finding a Volvo dealer ready to be of service.

But like many other things of value, it gets put away and forgotten. That's why we've come up with the idea of combining our dealer list with some valuable information you can use all the time.

In The Volvo Traveler you'll find the names, addresses and phone numbers covering Volvo's network in all 50 states as well as Canada. And, in addition, you have pages full of tips, advice and information we think you'll find interesting and useful — facts about saving money and about enjoying your Volvo.

The idea is simple. It's to help you get the most satisfaction out of your Volvo.

Good reading.

STRETCHING DOLLARS

$ Here's a lesson from truck drivers. They call it inertia driving. If conditions permit, speed up a little downhill so you can get over the next hill easier. Applied to economy driving, it still works the same way. You waste a lot of gas if you have to accelerate hard up a hill. **$

$ Every time you brake you turn the energy of your Volvo's motion into heat, throwing it away. Your engine uses gas to produce that energy and it needs more to regain it.

The moral is clear. Anticipate. Analyze what's ahead so you won't have to slow down or speed up as much. $

$ Don't creep. Of course you may be stuck in city traffic . . . which is tough on an engine . . . but if conditions permit, don't let your engine speed fall below its efficient operating range. Also make better use of your transmission. **$

§ One of the best gas savers is already on your Volvo — radial tires. Firestone says radials give you about 10% better mileage, Goodyear says 9%. Take good care of your tires and be sure to replace them with radials. §

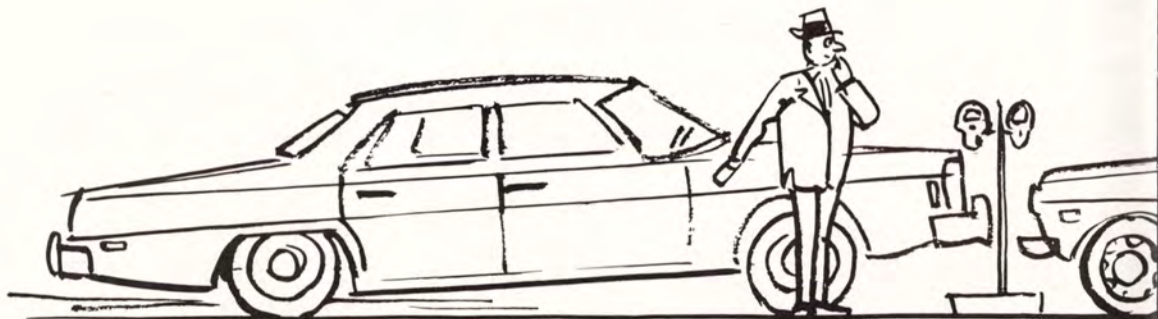

§ One of the best investments you can make is a tire pressure gauge. Too much air will boost mileage a fraction, but it's tough on the suspension, decreases traction and wears out the tire tread. Too little air is worse. Tread wears faster, tires squeal and both gas mileage and cornering stability suffer. §

§ Here's a double saving. Wheel alignment. Misaligned wheels not only can cut tire life, but also can raise havoc with gas economy. Keep a sharp lookout for uneven tire wear, usually a sure sign of alignment problems. §

§ Carrying extra weight around is another gas robber. So forego the convenience of storing your snow tires or golf clubs in the trunk. §

§ Let's destroy that old myth about engine warm-up. It's NOT a good idea to let your engine warm up for five or ten minutes before driving away.

An idling engine is loafing, so it takes much longer to reach its operating temperature. The answer is to start driving gently as soon as the oil pressure warning light goes out. §

$ Another old myth worth destroying is the one about racing your engine just before you turn off the ignition. Modern engines don't need to have their cylinders primed for a fast start. Your Volvo has an advanced ignition system and automatic choking to do that job for you. $

$ Think hot. A hot engine burns fuel more efficiently, so keep your eye on your coolant temperature. See your dealer if the needle isn't consistently high in the Normal area of the gauge. $

$ Analyzing on a broad scale can mean significant savings too. Have you ever traced your routine trips on a detailed map? Using a highway may seem faster than driving the back roads, but it may be a longer trip and less economical. Get yourself a county map from a stationery store, real estate agent or your county clerk. You may well discover more direct routes and simplify your travels. Also, get used to combining trips. $

$ When your Volvo is on a lift, have it checked for brake drag. You don't want your brakes preventing the wheels from rolling freely. $

$ Walk. Shoe leather is the greatest gas saver. (We just couldn't resist that one.) $

By combining these tips with common sense, you'll be a better driver plus you'll save money. How much? Try an easy experiment.

Drive the next tankful extra economically. Then compare your gas mileage. There's a chart to help you in the back of this booklet.

Now a little arithmetic will give you a very good idea of how much you can save every year.

Let's assume you drive about 200 miles a week or 10,000 miles a year. That's average. Then let's say your economy driving boosts your average by only two miles per gallon. That works out to about five weeks or more than 1,000 miles of free driving a year.

Numbers like that certainly should make you a believer. $

FUEL FACTS

NO-LEAD?

Some Volvos are being equipped with a catalytic converter for the first time in 1975. It's a small, muffler-shaped device, part of the exhaust system, that chemically changes polluting exhaust gases into harmless carbon dioxide and water. It's simple, efficient and virtually trouble-free except that it's very allergic to leaded gas. To keep your friendly gas station man from making a mistake, Volvos with catalysts, like all similar cars this year, have fuel filler tubes that are too small to accept leaded fuel nozzles.

Any Volvo without a catalyst, however, will run just fine on either leaded or unleaded fuel as long as it has the proper octane rating.

OCTANE?

Just by using the correct octane gas in your Volvo, you may save $50 to $75 a year. According to the Federal Trade Commission, that's how much money the average motorist wastes buying higher octane gas than his engine needs.

So now there's a nationwide law that requires octane ratings to be posted on all gas pumps. The only trouble is, you have to know how to interpret that rating, how to compare it to the different rating in your owner's manual. This is because the gasoline and auto industries use different octane rating systems.

The key fact to remember is this. The right octane gas for your car is about four numbers lower on the pump than the rating in your manual. All new Volvo engines call for 91 octane gas, which translates to about 87 octane at the pump. That's a money-saving fact worth remembering.

(There's a move afoot to end this confusion, so keep tabs on those gas pump labels.)

STORM WARNINGS

Volvo is a good bad weather car. It has to be to survive so well in Sweden. That's why your Volvo has a superior heating, defrosting and ventilation system, good visibility, outstanding rust protection and top notch handling.

No matter where you live, you're bound to encounter bad weather, so we want you to be prepared. Know how to get the most out of your car's defroster. Know that your wipers are doing their job. When cleaning your windows, take a few extra seconds to wipe your headlights and taillights. The first step to driving safely through a storm is being able to see as well as possible.

Volvo gives you another important bad weather advantage — radial tires. Not only do radials last longer than regular tires.

they give you up to 10% better mileage. They also have better traction. Although radials should give you somewhat better traction on packed or shallow snow, they're no substitute for snow tires. If you drive in snow country, don't take a chance on a winter without them. Also, summer or winter, don't take a chance on mixing radials and non-radials. A mix could well destroy the balanced handling we engineered into your car.

Speaking of handling, here's a lifesaving tip from bad weather driving pros. When the going gets slippery, choose the first empty stretch of road to try accelerating and braking until you get a firm feeling for the traction limits of your car. Don't wait until you need your brakes to find out how fast you can stop. That's too late.

No Argument

Plain and simple, this is a plea for you to wear your safety belts.

Volvo pioneered safety belts and our study of 28,000 accidents helped prove their value to the rest of the world. Yet the plain truth is that belts still fall tragically short of their great lifesaving potential. Not because they don't work, but because so few people bother to wear them.

Nevertheless, we won't stop urging you to use your safety belts because we KNOW they are the vital link to the superior safety we have worked so hard to build into your car. In fact, even though the law requires 3-point belts for front seat passengers only, Volvo installs them in the rear seat too.

Right now our engineers are working hard to perfect more safety features to make your next Volvo even safer. In the meantime, if you're not wearing your belts regularly, start today. Please.

For the next week, take the few seconds needed to fasten your safety belt each time you get into your Volvo. That's all it should take to get in the habit.

Suit Yourself

We created this booklet to help you get the most satisfaction out of your Volvo. One way is to add accessories. Accessories are nice because you can add them anytime, they can increase the value of your Volvo at resale time and you can tailor your car to suit your personality or the kind of driving you do most.

So if you have a child you can add a guard between the front seats, a door console to hold the baby's bottle or a luggage compartment basket for dirty diapers. Seat covers might be a good idea too!

If you buy a camping trailer, you can add a trailer hitch, towing mirrors, heavy-duty shock absorbers or a suspension leveling system. Even a roof rack.

If you move to the city, you can add power windows or a locking gas cap.

Or if you move to the country, you can add fog lights built into a sporty GT grille, snow chains, stone guards, floor mats or perhaps a ski rack.

When the heat becomes unbearable, you can add an air conditioner.

Be sure to take a look at our expanding accessories assortment the next time you feel like being good to yourself. You'll find more than 60 different kinds of accessories to choose from, all of them designed to add to your driving comfort or safety.

Considering the complexity of jet airliners it's amazing how many trouble free hours they log. Trains, too, and fleet trucks.

The real secret to this reliability is preventive maintenance. Race drivers who consistently make it to the finish line also credit preventive maintenance for their success.

Now we aren't advocating that you tear your car apart and put it back together every weekend, but we do want to convince you to protect your investment and your driving pleasure by spotting problems before they cause grief and cost unnecessary money.

Some preventive maintenance you can do yourself. Some of it you'll have to pay for. Either way it's a wise investment.

Based on operating experience with Volvos all over the world, our engineers have developed a maintenance service schedule. It's designed to stop problems before they start. Check the details in your Warranties and Maintenance booklet.

To neglect this schedule is foolish, since it only calls for an inspection about twice a year.

Following this schedule really is the most important single thing you can do to assure yourself of a long, happy relationship with your Volvo. We know. We planned it that way.

To supplement these inspections, we want you to be a vigilant trouble shooter too. We want you to keep your eyes and ears open for tell-tale signs of impending trouble.

A STITCH IN TIME

Squeeze the rubber radiator hoses the next time you're waiting for the gas station attendant to check your oil. When they start to feel spongy instead of firm, it's time to have them replaced. At the same time, check for worn, loose or cracked fan belts.

Keep faithful track of your gas mileage. If it drops without reason, it's a sure sign your engine isn't running just right.

Watch your engine run on a dark night. You'll easily spot small exhaust leaks or jumping ignition sparks that can cause hard starting or rough running.

Check your tire pressures often and keep an eye on tread wear.

But most of all, please don't procrastinate about investigating strange sounds or symptoms. A creaking noise from a wheel may be only a flexing trim ring, but it also could be an grinding axle bearing.

A vibrating steering wheel may be only a missing balance weight, but it also could be a failing steering linkage.

Good trouble shooters live by the creed that little problems never fade away: they just grow into big problems.

So please be a good trouble shooter. Follow our service schedule. Help your car give you all of the satisfaction you expect from it.

You undoubtedly know that your auto insurance premium is greatly affected by where you live. If you move from New York City, let's say, to Niagara Falls, your premium should be just about cut in half.

You also should know that all new Volvo owners are entitled to the maximum bumper discount which, for many insurance companies, is a healthy 20% of the collision premium.

But do you know that many insurance companies offer big discounts for students who maintain good grades? It's called the Good Student Plan and discounts can be as high as 25%.

You may be eligible for even more of a discount if your son or daughter is more than 100 miles away at college.

And do you know that you probably are eligible for another big saving on the day your teenage son or daughter joins the Armed Forces?

Are you teaming up with other people to share the drive to work? Many insurance companies have begun giving significant car pool discounts.

On the subject of driving to work, consider that your auto insurance premium is based on how many miles you commute. Driving

In most states, for example, if you're married, over 25 and have no accident record, business driving will cost you nearly 50% more than pleasure driving.

Then there's the whole subject of "no fault" insurance. Congress currently is studying a federal "no fault" bill. Meanwhile, 26 states already have some form of "no fault," but no two are exactly alike. So be sure you understand your options if you live in a "no fault" state.

As you can see, auto insurance, like automobiles, is available in a wide variety of sizes, shapes, options and prices. You owe it to yourself to shop for your insurance carefully and then review it carefully at least once a year to be sure your policy reflects exactly how your car is used and who uses it.

Special Knowledge

The auto industry is working hard convincing Americans to get their cars serviced at authorized dealers. The reason is that today's cars have become too complex for inexperienced mechanics.

At the same time we've become more aware of our responsibility for providing good service. Here's what we're doing at Volvo.

Let's start with the dealer's service department. Volvo recognizes that proper servicing begins with good management. It isn't enough to just get the job done, it's equally important to you to have your car ready on time and at the lowest cost. This means putting the right specialist on the right job.

We want a Volvo service manager to be a businessman first, a mechanic second. So our management programs are being used to develop scheduling procedures, cut wasted time and increase efficiency.

At the next level, we've increased our instructor staff by nearly 50%. There's now one man for every nine Volvo dealers whose responsibility is to train mechanics and keep them up to date on servicing.

Another program we've started is in-dealer training that doesn't require a Volvo instructor. The goal is to have a technical presentation specialist in each dealership to administer this training area.

All this, and the continual trouble-shooting and maintenance information that is regularly received by your dealer, will get you faster and even more professional service for your Volvo.

MILES GALLONS = MPG

This table does the arithmetic for you. Where the gallons you used meet the miles you drove is where you'll find your average miles per gallon.

In case you've driven less than 100 miles and used less than 8 gallons, simply double both your numbers. That'll give you figures you can find on this table while still giving you an accurate miles per gallon reading.
