

or the supermarket or the veterinarian or an auction or the nursery—

Or wherever you want to go (within reason). Whenever you want to go (within business hours Mon.-Fri.). In a Volvo 145 station wagon.

As you can see, this isn't the usual garden-variety test drive where all you do is drive around the block. This is a test trip. And you decide on the destination before you call us to set up your appointment.

When figuring out what to do with somebody else's station wagon, you might keep the following in mind: 1) the man who'll deliver your Volvo and accompany you on your trip was hired by us because he can move cars... not refrigerators. Please handle him with care. 2) But if you want to carry a six-foot sofa, swell. 3) Or if you want to invite three friends along for the ride, let them be your guests. 4) And if you're hesitating about driving into congested city areas, don't. The 145 is a good three feet shorter than the giant tough-to-park wagons.

After you take the Volvo wagon for a test trip, there's absolutely no obligation on your part to hold on to it.

But if your intuition tells you that your local friendly Volvo dealer isn't offering the use of a Volvo station wagon solely on the ground of friendship... you're right.

The roof rack is an optional accessory on the Volvo 145 station wagon.
